
Innovative development is based on human resources

The republic's and the neighboring territories' arid and semi-arid climates, where artificial irrigation is the primary method of agricultural production, and the methodical implementation of reclamation measures necessitate the training of qualified specialists with up-to-date scientific knowledge and technological techniques for restoring and sustaining the productivity of irrigated soils under water-limited conditions.

Full text